Abstract

A method and system of formatting and transferring image data allows a user to easily select image data format settings and format received image data in accordance with the user selected format settings. The user can save the image data to a second location in the format that the user so chooses. Manipulation of image data within the same application usable to transfer that data eliminates the need to rely on multiple applications.